THE THREE BARTLETT BROTHERS.

Allen F. Bartlett, for more than 20 years a grocer on Sagamore street, Lynn, died at his home, 1 West Baltimore street, shortly after midnight, after an illness of many months and which took a serious turn following the deaths of his two brothers in Norway, during the year. One brother, Warren F., died at Norway, March 15, and the other, Eugene W., died here on May 24. The funeral of Allen will be held from the same home where services were conducted for his brothers after prayer has been offered at the family home at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Allen F. Bartlett was the son of Allen and Mary Elizabeth Brooks Bartlett, who were among the early settlers of Norway and where they resided nearly all their lives. The sons received their education in the Norway Liberal Institute, since changed to the name of the Norway High school, and for some time were engaged with their father in the grocery business in that town.

Thirty-five years ago Allen went to Lynn, and after working in the shoe factories for a time, opened a grocery store on Sagamore street, which he conducted until his health compelled him to retire from business.

He was a member of the Norway lodge Knights of Pythias, and the Oxford club of Lynn. He married 32 years ago last Sunday, Helen Vose of Buckfield, Me., who survives. His only other surviving relative is George A. Brooks, of Norway, an uncle, and from whose house on Thursday the funeral services will be held. Burial will be in Pine Grove cemetery, Norway. Rev. R. J. Bruce, pastor of the Congregational church in that town will conduct the services there and a delegation from the Norway lodge of Knights of Pythias will be bearers.

A Letter to Norway People.

To Editor of The Norway Advertiser,

Dear Sir:—As the time approaches for B. F. Spinney & Co. to cease manufacturing shoes in Norway, I think the long period of association between the town's people and ourselves should have some recognition in the form of spoken word, and I am disposed to take the medium of your paper to say to your citizens and our employees that it is with the utmost regret I have found it to be my unsought duty to be the dominant factor in this decision.

My impressions of Norway and its people during the period of my being often in your midst are unqualifiedly pleasant, and, having had opportunities to test the spirit of many of your people, I have always found it liberal and agreeable. I may confidently include my father when I say I sincerely regret our withdrawal from the town, and trust your feeling towards us may be as kindly as ours certainly are to you.

It may not be amiss to state that the news items appearing from time to time in your local and our home papers, in reference to our business, are often misleading, as for instance the insertion in the current issue of the Norway Advertiser. We have not, as stated therein, rented three additional floors in a neighboring building to our Lynn factory, to which we shall transfer the B. F. Spinney & Co. business. This business is in process of liquidation, and very little of its former production will be retained by Faunce & Spinney, as, in the main, the grades of goods made here cannot be profitably manufactured in Lynn. It is true we are taking some more floor space to enlarge a comparatively small factory, for the purpose of continuing to manufacture the higher priced grades of Radcliffe shoes in connection with our varied lines of Patrician footwear.

I make this explanation because I wish you to believe if the business was to be perpetuated as heretofore it certainly would not be removed from the town of Norway.

Believe me,
Very truly yours,
FRANK SPINNEY.

Houghton Samuel Ward.

The youngest child of Rev. Merrill C. Ward died at Jamaica Plain, Thursday, Sept. 18. The family spent this summer at Maplecroft Farm in Buxton, and all were in excellent health. The morning of Sept. 12, Houghton showed symptoms of indigestion, but not seeming to be ill, the family started on the boat that night for their new home in Boston, where Mr. Ward was to begin his pastorate Sept. 14 at St. Paul's church in Jamaica Plain.

As the baby did not improve, a doctor was called but each day he pronounced the symptoms as in no way serious until Thursday, when a stoppage and some unforseen bowel complication appeared. A second physican and trained nurse added their skill to the parents' vigilant care, but at 6.15 p. m., the little one passed through the heavenly gate. Next afternoon, Rev. Dr. George L. Perin, who married the parents, offered prayer at the Greenough avenue home, and that night the family returned on the Portland boat.

Saturday afternoon there was a private funeral at the Buxton home attended by Rev. Fenwick L Leavitt of Woodfords. Howard Stevens sang "Come Unto Me," "Thy Will Be Done" and "Abide With Me." Is It Your Kidneys?

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Trouble.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is where the danger often lies. You should realize that these troubles often lead to dropsy or Bright's disease. An effective remedy for weak or diseased kidneys is Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of this vicinity are constantly testifying.

Mrs. C. F. Ware, Pleasant St., South Paris, Me., says: "One of my family suffered from kidney trouble. There ware sharp shooting pains theough the small of the back and dizzy spells and headaches. On a friend's advice Doan's Kidney Pills were used. They gave prompt relief."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Retired Georgia Planter's Advice to Kidney Sufferers

Regarding the wonderful curative merits of your Swamp-Root, I cannot say too much. After suffering severely for three years or more with severe pains caused by weak kidneys, I was finally induced to try Swamp-Root through a testimonial I read in one of the newspapers. I was in such a condition that I was obliged to arise from my bed six or eight times every night. I purchased a fifty-cent bottle and before it was used I felt so much relief that I purchased a one-dollar bottle and by the time this was taken the old pains had left my back and I could sleep the whole night through. I am a retired planter, 70 years of age, and owing to Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, I am in the best of health and feel like a boy. I am always glad to recommend Swamp-Root to those who are in need of it.

Sincerely yours,
C. E. USSERY,
Bowersville, Ga.

Personally appeared before me, this 8th of September, 1909, C. E. Ussery, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

T. H. McLANE,
Notary Public.

Letter to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Prove What Swamp-Root Will Do For You

Send to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N.Y., for a sample bottle. It will convince anyone. You will also receive a booklet of valuable information, telling all about the kidneys and bladder. When writing, be sure and mention the Norway, Weekly, Oxford Co Me., Advertiser. Regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

The Old Fashioned Parlor.

There's a grim old fashioned parlor I remember long ago,
Where the sunlight was a never welcome guest.
The blinds were closed and fastened and the curtains were drawn low.
And its gloom upon my soul is still impressed.

On the floor an old rag carpet sewed and wove by patient hands,
With here and there a rug in burlap drawn;
And once to venture in there was like touring foreign lands
For the place was closed and locked from dawn to dawn.

A whatnot in the corner held some treasured books of old,
Pilgrim's Progress and Old Baxter's Saints at Rest;
With more care they all were guarded than if made of precious gold
Which with awe their yellow pages did invest.

An old hair covered sofa grim within a corner stood,
The fireplace very rarely saw a flame;
Though close beside the hearthstone always stood a pile of wood
To be ready when the sewing circle came.

For then the doors were opened and the curtains raised a mite,
And the chairs were set in order all about;
And the pictures even blinked from the unaccustomed light
And wondered why they didn't keep it out.

But now how different it is from the days of long ago,
For instead of germs and microbes holding sway
Old Sol is 'lowed to enter and the breezes 'lowed to blow,
And the children play about in reckless way.

Civic Improvements.

Cleaning up the Roadsides and the Fence Corners.

It has long been realized that the tangle of bushes growing along our highways and fences is not only a disgrace to the town and an eyesore to the community, but is the best breeding place that can be found for our most dangerous insect pests, as the brown-tail and gypsy moths, the tent caterpiller and other pests. The Public Laws of the State of Maine for 1907, Chap. 14, section 11, as amended, provides that the municipal officers of a town or city shall "before the first day of June of each year, cut, burn and destroy all dead or worthless apple trees and all wild cherry trees within the limits of all public ways, streets or parks." For neglect or failure to do this each municipal officer "shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars." In many towns this law has been unheeded and the disgraceful accumulation and growth of brush and bushes still remain a breeding place for insect pests and an eyesore to the community.

While the law commands a cleaning up of the roadsides, only public opinion and civic pride will clean up the fences and corners in the fields which are just as important and dangerous as the roadsides.

The Maine Department of agriculture in the Maine State Grange are working together in an effort to arouse civic pride and interest in the destruction of those eyesores and breeding places for insect pests, the bushes and brush along the highways and upon private property.

A prize of $40 has been offered by individuals through the Department of Agriculture, for the best article on Roadside Improvement, written by any member of any grange in Maine. Each grange in the state is entitled to enter one essay in the contest. The article must be typewritten, and not over 2,000 words in length, and it must be mailed to the State Superintendent of schools, Payson Smith, Augusta, before November 17, 1913. The article will be judged on the basis of 40 points for literary merit, and 60 points for economic merit.

Artemus Ward.

Original Drawing Hanging in Bridgton Stable.

An original manuscript by Artemus Ward is hanging in the stable of the Cumberland House in Bridgton and is as nearly unique as all the humorist's productions were. It is not a pen manuscript, but one done more after the Chinese fashion, with a brush. It is a sign, painted on an ordinary board, and with just enough irregularity in the lettering to prove that the painter was more genius than sign-painter. Artemus Ward's name, as everybody knows, was Charles Farrar Browne.

He was born in Waterford, only a few miles from Bridgton. When he was 15 years old he was apprenticed to the Skowhegan Clarion and his career thenceforth was away from home.

After he became famous he used to spend Summers at home and put in a good deal of time loafing in the paint shop of Charles Jordan in Bridgton. The place was always blue with smoke, for it was a favorite loafing place for several old cronies. One day while the talk was going on about him, Browne casually picked up a bit of board, sorted out some brushes and in silence and without the knowledge of those present, executed and set up the sign "No Smoking Allowed." It was a pure joke, for Browne himself was a smoker.

It was after the death of Artemus Ward that Mr. Jordan gave the sign to W. D. Bacon, the proprietor of the Cumberland Hotel and another long-standing friend of Browne. Mr. Bacon hung the sign up in his stable, and there it has always stayed ever since. It is locally famous and one of the sights of Bridgton which is always shown to visitors.

STRENGTHEN WEAK KIDNEYS.

Don't suffer longer with weak kidneys. You can get prompt relief by taking Electric Bitters, that wonderful remedy praised by women everywhere. Start with a bottle today, you will soon feel like a new woman with ambition to work without fear of pain. Mr. John Dowling of San Francisco, writes:—"Gratitude for the wonderful effect of Electric Bitters prompts me to write. It cured my wife when all else failed." Good for the liver as well. Nothing better for indigestion or biliousness. Price 50c and $1.00 at the Noyes Drug Store. 36 39

Combining against the passengers. And now the Pullman car porters are going to organize. What does this mean? Are they going to attack the helpless passenger in pairs instead of singly? If a man can be separated from all his movable wealth by one porter, what will be left of the poor wretch when he has the entire Porter's Union combing him with a whisk broom?

Fire Prevention.

Honorable J. W. Blunt. Insurance Commissioner of the State, is calling attention to some of the causes of fires which, with a little care, could be prevented. His suggestions regarding chimneys, furnaces, stoves, stove pipes, ashes and kerosene as an illuminant are of especial value at this time when we are about to make the most of these different articles.

He calls attention to the fact that this is the season of the year when a large percentage of the fires reported to the insurance department are shown to have been caused by carelessness and neglect of the occupant to see that the heaters, furnaces and stoves and the connections thereof, which in many cases have not been used since last spring, are in a suitable condition to undertake the work to be imposed upon them. A little effort and care now may save you from a bad fire later in the winter.

You, as a householder or tenant, should see that the chimney is in good repair and if you find bricks loose or mortar falling out between the bricks it should be repaired at once, as many fires are caused by the condition of chimney neglect. Also see that the chimney is cleaned. If possible have the creosote which has collected removed. Don't wait until it burns out itself for if you do you may be without a home some cold night during the coming winter.

Have your stove pipe taken out and cleaned. It won't cost much and may save a bad fire; if it is found to have rusted through or the seams to have opened insist on its being replaced or repaired.

Stoves should always be placed on a sheet of zinc or some other metal. This should be extended in front of the stove some little distance to catch ashes, coals and burning wood which is likely to fall on the floor. If the stove is set within three feet of the wall a shield of metal or asbestos board which is not expensive should be placed over the woodwork or plastering. This should extend at least a foot above the top of the stove. A little time along these lines may save a serious fire.

Ashes are another source of danger. They should never be placed in wooden boxes, barrels or receptacles of this nature or piled up against the back of wooden buildings or partitions. Many fires have been caused by these things which are sheer carelessness.

Another great danger from fire is caused by kerosene lamps.

Lamps are responsible for nearly two thousand fires each year in the United States. Under no circumstances fill a lamp which is burning. Never use paper shades. If lanterns are used around the barn be sure to hang them up. Do not leave them on the floor for the cat or dog to upset.

A little attention to these things may save you a big loss and if people as a whole in the State of Maine would exercise an amount of care along these lines we would not have as many fires as we do now by one-half.

On Thursday at half after twelve M., at the Bethel Inn, Rev. W. C. Curtis officiating, took place the marriage of Robert H. Uihlien and Mary Ilsley, both of Milwaukee. The rooms were beautifully decorated with cut flowers. After a wedding breakfast at the Inn, the party left on the afternoon train for New York and sailed Saturday for Europe to spend the winter. They took their automobile with them.

About 40 members of the W. R. C. tendered a reception at the home of Mrs. M. L. Thurston to Mrs. Alice J. Farwell, who will soon go to Saco to live with her uncle. A short program of readings and music was enjoyed and the presentation of a book entitled "Laddie." Mrs. Alice Jordan made the presentation speech, thanking Mrs. Farwell for the members of Brown W. R. C. for all the help she had given the order. Refreshments were enjoyed during the social hour.

Joseph Andrew's Letters.

When I first went to Los Angeles I was advised to put up at the Natic house. I did so and was so well pleased that I made that my head quarters each time that I have visited the city. It is a first-class low-priced house. Rooms from 50 cents to $1 50 a day and splendid meals furnished in its spacious dining room at 25 cents to rich and poor alike.

Its auto buss meets all trains and takes its patrons to and from all trains free of charge. I advise all readers of the Advertiser, who visit Los Angeles for the first time to stop at the Natic until they have a chance to look around. Los Angeles has a very large number of hotels and rooming houses and even in the residential district there are many "Rooms to rent" signs hung out, or placed in the windows.

California's most productive crop is her "Tourist Crop" who come each year in ever increasing numbers, many who have money invested in orange and lemon groves, fruit lands or in town property, while many others, who find employment at the various trades buy small but neat cottages on the instalment plan and pay a certain portion of their wages each month, hoping in time to own a home of their own. It costs no more to live in the coast cities than in the east. By renting a furnished room and patronizing a nearby restaurant or grocery store, one can live quite cheap and well.

At Long Beach I patronized the best and cheapest barber shop that I was ever in. There were either eight or ten chairs and as many fine looking men were either busy or stood ready to wait upon their numerous customers. Large cards were posted around the room on which were printed in large letters, the prices charged, in part as follows: Shave, 10 cents, hair cut, 10 cents, shampoo, 10 cents and so on down the list, nothing over 10 cents.

On March 31st I bade my Tropico friends goodbye and started on the first section of my return trip by way of San Francisco, 594 miles dista t via the Santa Fe railroad. My ticket was a nine months tourist's and gave me the privilege of stopping off as often and as long as I choose within the time limit.

My first stop was at San Barnardino, 60 miles distant from Los Angeles where I took a branch train to Paris, 24 miles distant, where I visited two days and nights with my old South Dakota frinnd, Dr. E. E. Sill and his family. Mr. and Mrs. Sill came to California twenty years ago, both then in feeble health. They own a valuable ranch in the foothills about three miles from town, where they keep several hundred Angora goats and 30 or 40 head of cattle, mostly Jerseys. They have a family of four boys and two girls the youngest of which is about fifteen years of age. The doctor and his good wife got what they came to California for, good health. They have a pleasant happy home with their children with them or close beside them. This was my fourth visit with them in as many different years and I always enjoy my visits there very much indeed.

Paris is a pretty and growing village. It is located on the San Jacinto river. The valley is entirely surrounded by high and rocky hills, it is perhaps one to three miles wide and ten miles long and under irrigation is very productive. On the barron hills in the wet season wild flowers grow in abundance and all around grease wood and sage brush grow in unlimited quantities. These hills are also the favorite haunts of the jack rabbit, wolf, wild cat and rattle snake and I might also add the fragrant bower of of the honey bee, for I have been told that the finest California honey is made from sage brush flowers.

My next stop was with another old Dakota friend, Juna Sargent at Riverside. Mr. Sargent moved to California four years ago, and about a year ago bought an orange and lemon orchard, paying for the same I think about $75,000 in Dakota land and town property. He had 30 acres in fine bearing orange trees, 20 acres in young lemon and orange trees and the other 10 acres in alfalfa and other field crops. Mr. Sargent "got it in the neck" as the saying goes, this year, as at least half of his oranges and most of his lemons were ruined by the early freeze of Jan. 8th when the thermometer in this section went below 20 above zero. He did not think that his trees had been badly injured by the bad freeze as they were blossoming quite freely and he was planning for valuable improvements upon his farm which is one of the finest in town.

Riverside, "The orange grove city," is located in one of the most beautiful valleys in the Golden West. It, with San Barnardino, Redlands and Colton all nearby cities, is the center of the orange growing section of California.

Three years ago about Dec. 1st, I left South Dakota at the beginning of a three days' blizzard and cold wave. Across the prairies of Iowa and Kansas the Storm King followed us with unabated fury. Across the high tablelands and mountain passes of Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona, the north wind howled and Jack Frost did his best to freeze us out. When on the afternoon of the third day our train glided swiftly down into this beautiful valley, with its fruit laden trees, bright flowers and singing bird, it seemed almost as though we were in a Fairy land. Ones sensations cannot be explained in words. It must be seen and felt to be fully appreciated.

But even this bright land of fruit and flowers has its drawbacks. Jack Frost sometimes comes as an unwelcome guest. Fruit pests by the score have to be fought against, while railroad transportation to far away markets and middle men's profits often leave but little cash for the original grower of the fruit.

BODILY VIGOR OF DAIRY BRED COWS

It is not unusual to hear slighting remarks with reference to the constitution of dairy bred cows. Not long since we discussed this subject with a reader, says the Kansas Farmer, who said that he believed that the everyday farmer was not justified in keeping pure bred stock; that three-fourths or seven-eighths grades were about as highly bred as a farmer should own. Further inquiry developed the fact that this man believed that as dairy animals approached pure breeding their constitution became weakened and so required the very best care and even then were short lived. He gave it as his opinion that the large, husky, fat beef animal possessed the most rugged and vigorous constitution. We asked the question as to whether or not this applied to the human family. The gentleman immediately saw the point and began to sidestep.

Beef animals belong to what is known as the lymphatic temperament. This temperament is exemplified in the case of fleshy humans. Some of such persons as well as some of such animals do have vigorous constitutions, showing that the constitution does not follow or depend upon the size or the amount of flesh carried. The dairy cow belongs to what is known as the nervous temperament and which corresponds with the same temperament in humans. Such temperament does not indicate nervousness, but is the temperament applied to humans as well as to animals, spare in physical makeup. Humans built on this plan are often extremely vigorous. The size or the amount of flesh carried is not at all an indication of constitution.

The Jersey is a pretty good cow to pin your faith to if you wish to produce butter economically. Many Jersey breeders think that if a cow isn't a Jersey it isn't a dairy cow, but impartial observers know that there is good in any really excellent dairy cow. Rose of Greenway, the Jersey cow here shown, is owned by the Delaware Agricultural college. In five months she has made over 5,000 pounds of milk and 310 pounds of butter. She weighs about 800 pounds and promises to produce 600 pounds of butter during the year.

There is only one test of constitution, and that is the amount of work the animal is able to do and stand up under the strain. In the case of the beef animal this is the amount of flesh it is able to put on as a result of the amount of feed it consumes. If the beef cow is a vigorous animal, eats heartily, grows fat and so is not susceptible to disease we may say she has a vigorous constitution. If, on the other hand, she is not anxious for her feed, is finicky in the selection of her feed, she is regarded as lacking in constitution.

The same condition applies exactly to dairy cows, the size of the frame or the quantity of meat on that frame not being a consideration. The fact is that the dairy cow in the production of dairy products has a strain on her animal body which is in no manner equaled by the beef animal. If she were weak constitutionally she would not be able to withstand this strain. The life of the dairy animal is as long as that of the beef animal, and there is no evidence whatever to show that dairy animals do not have a constitution in every respect equal to beef animals. It is a fact that in the very makeup of the dairy animal she is not able to resist cold rain and sleet to the same extent that the animal clad with a thick coat of fat and beef is. If in the handling of the dairy herd it is the intent of the farmer to expose his cows to the rigor of the elements, then he will find that his thin and spare dairy animals will not resist the elements as do the beef animals. He will find at the same time, too, that he will not get milk from the dairy animals kept under such conditions.

Ration For Work Horses.

In government tests of feeds for work horses, made with artillery horses at Fort Riley, Kan., it has been found that the cheapest ration and the one which gave the largest gains consisted of eight pounds of corn, two pounds of oats and ten pounds of alfalfa hay and cost 13 cents per head per day. The tests were made with ten lots of horses, with about seventy-five in each lot, and seven lots containing from seventeen to twenty horses each. The gain made was 25.6 pounds per horse in 140 days.

A ration consisting of oats, corn, wheat bran and timothy hay in the ratio of 4:6:4:12 produced six pounds of gain in 120 days, and the animals showed the best condition of any in the test, but the ration cost 19 cents per day.—Farm and Fireside.

Stone Reunion.

The threatening weather of the 20th did not prevent the descendants of Luther and Hadassah (Kimball) Stone from holding their annual reunion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Bryant.

A bountiful dinner was served at noon, which all enjoyed. Then a few hours were passed in renewing old ties and becoming acquainted with the cousins who were with us for the first time.

As it drew near the time for the pleasant gathering to disperse, a group was formed for a photograph.

Mrs. Celia Stone was the oldest member present, and with her were 24 of her family, consisting of children, grandchildren and great-grandchild.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Scribner extended an invitation to the members to meet at their home in 1914.

Those of the family present were:

Young Jack was talking to the new visitor soon after her arrival. He eyed her critically for a few moments, then looked up and said:

"Well, you're on the wrong side. You'll find that out," replied Jack without removing his gaze.—Harper's Bazar.

Marks on the Baggage.

They Tell Waiters Abroad the kind of Man the Owner Is.

Much traveled persons who carefully examine their trunks will find thereon a number of cabalistic marks which they probably put down to the wear and tear imposed on the baggage. As a matter of fact, the signs come out of chance. They are placed there by the waiters at the various hotels whereat the traveler has stayed and have a direct meaning.

A sort of freemasonry exists among waiters at European hotels. They have a system of marking baggage so as to tell other waiters the manner of man that the traveler is as regards tipping.

The traveler who arrives at a hotel with his baggage marked with a straight upright line on either side of the locks is sure of good attention. He is classified as "very liberal." A horizontal straight mark in the upper right hand corner of a trunk means that the owner is no good at all, while if this mark is accompanied by a V mark it signifies to the waiting fraternity that the traveler is the limit—entirely hopeless.

A cross mark on the lower right hand corner conveys the intelligence that the owner of the trunk is rather eccentric, but worth paying attention to. A diagonal mark in the lower left hand corner speaks of a person who is eccentric without being liberal.

HEBRON.

Hebron Academy.

During the summer many improvements have been made at Hebron Academy in the different houses, but the campus is still incomplete. Many rooms in the gymnasium and Barrows lodge are remodeled and the recitation rooms have been painted. The principal's office was enlarged and greatly improved.

One of the things most needed by the school is cement walks. The gift of the graduating class last spring was a cement walk extending from the east entrance of the academy to Atwood Hall, and to the gymnasium. Another short piece was built during the summer.

The lower end of the athletic field has settled considerably since it was built and F. O. Stanley, maker of the Stanley Steam Car, has donated 20 wheel barrows and as many spades to improve the field. Every night between 50 and 60 boys are at work filling in the hole and by Saturday of this week they expect to have this completed.

To the River Saco.

'Round where the Saco winds its silvery wreath,
With boughs of living green its arch beneath,
No joy of king enthroned could e'er compare
With that of wandering in thy realms so fair,
To stay for respite in those fairy aisles,
Leaving behind all toil and care awhile.
Here where the crystal waters calmly roll,
Then rushing on more swift to join the goal,
As o'er some rocky bed it hurries on,
Like sunbeams ushering in the early dawn,—
Then seeming to stand still, then rushing fast,
'Till 'round the curving hillside it is passed.

O sweet, O rolling river, with us stay,
And water cool green river banks alway,
Stay with us on and on 'till time's no more;
In all thy curves make fertile many a shore;
Blessing the herd upon the mountain side,
Bearing the boatman on thy swelling tide.
Turning the wheel wherever power is sought,
Brightening the landscape, and what e'er thy lot,—
O long may thy pure stream the hillsides span,
Long may thy music charm the ear of man,
Bearing a lesson to human kind forsooth,
Of consistency, purity and truth.
Where once the Indian roved with savage tread,
May only comfort reign and peace instead,
Here may the stranger from life's restless race
Find on thy shore a welcome resting place.
That care and ills, that overpower the soul,
Roll off as do thy mighty billows roll.
And so may thy fair, mountain circled place
Yield sweetest influence time can ne'er efface.
This is thy mission:—Form the leafy bowery,
Giving new life to every bird and flower;
Or stretching limpid on some plain and vast,
Till all thy former fury is o'erpast.
Meandering round some hill or mountain side,
Return again thy waters deep and wide,
In graceful curves, or down some mountain free,
Dash leaping, sparkling falls to cross the lea.
And so entranced with all thy charms and power,
Lingering we while away the passing hour.
O sweet, and constant river be our guide,
And lead the way whatever ills betide!
May ever in our hearts thy image seem
Like the deer's reflection in thy cooling stream
Restful, and kind may thy influence ever be,
Still pressing on to join the boundless sea.
And like the saint know no continuing home,
Yet looking forward, seeking one to come.
O roving river, soon thou'lt surely rest,
And cease thy wanderings on old Ocean's breast;
And there clasped in that long sought last embrace,
Thy mission done and closed thy restless race.

JENNIE E. SNOW KIMBALL

A Visit Long Remembered.

An interesting fact in regard to the writing of Songo River, by the poet Longfellow, is that 38 years ago Sept. 14, 1875, the poet, his sisters and brother Samuel made a trip over the Sebago Lake route, spending the night at the Bridgton house, a famous old hostelry which has since burned. He was the observed of all at the time of his stay in Bridgton, and when he left in the morning a large crowd collected outside the hotel.

He is described by one who saw him at the time as an elderly gentleman, wearing a light overcoat and black suit, with a black silk hat contrasting with his snowy white hair and beard. The party returned over the same route in the morning and soon after Mr. Longfellow wrote the poem which has since become so familiar, and which first appeared in the Bridgton News, through courtesy of the poet's publishers.

When asking the landlady at that time Mrs. Ann Davis, who now resides on North High street, in regard to the visit of the poet, the hotel register of 1875 was produced and the names of the Longfellow party were found, as distinct as when they were written. On the same leaf was seen the signature of Thomas B. Reed, in his own peculiar handwriting.

The poet's visit is remembered by many in town that saw him at that time, or who have heard the story from others, and the poem is particularly well known in this region, describing as it does a unique river so near the town.

Protection to the Pores.

Friction means a healthy skin and a good complexion.

Unless the pores are kept open by manual labor it is necessary to resort to artificial means to keep the skin in good condition.

A flesh brush, loofah, or friction glove should form part of every bathing equipment.

A rough towel, used vigorously after the bath, can also accomplish much.

First the arms should be rubbed down from the elbow. Then a rotary stroke should be used on the upper arm and shoulder.

The tender skin between armpit and wrist should be rubbed more gently.

In addition to invigorating the arms, the hands themselves are beautified by this treatment.

The legs should be massaged in the same fashion from waist to knees and from knees to ankles.

A brisk friction of the feet, particularly of the soles, stimulates the circulation and soothes the nerves.

For between the shoulder blades and the back a long shaped loofah, covered on one side with Turkish toweling, should be used.

Such treatment consistently carried out will keep the skin smooth, soft and youthful looking.

Accidental Shooting.

Raymond Henry, 13 year old son of J. Edgar Henry died at a local hospital at 12.30 o'clock Monday morning as a result of being shot through the head with a bullet from a 22 calibre rifle in the hands of Joseph McLeary.

Master Henry, with a party of other lads of his age, were at play near the poor farm on the Swift river road, and were building a camp, a pastime which they frequently followed. Joe McCleary, one of the party who is also 13 years old, was shooting his 22 calibre rifle at a target, and did not know that Raymond was in range. Raymond, who was behind a bush, jumped up just in time to receive the bullet in the head. It passed entirely through the skull, and mangled the lobes of the brain fearfully. The terrified lads summoned help, and Raymond was taken in an automobile to his home and later to the hospital, where an operation was performed about nine o'clock.

He was a pupil at the Bisbee school, and was a Boy Scout. He was an active lad, full of the love of out of door life, and spent much time at play in the woods near the Park, building camps and following out scout tactics. He was popular and much liked among his associaties. He attended the Baptist Sunday school.

Don't Sleep Well No Good Reason Just Can't Sleep

Some people can't sleep. There seems to be no special reason. They have no disease of the nervous system. Digestion is fairly good. Their habits are pretty good. They may smoke a little or drink a little, yet their habits are fair. Still they can't sleep well.

Just a little unbalanced in the nerve centers. That is all. They should have a little "righting up."

A tonic will generally do this. The right sort of a tonic. Peruna is exactly the tonic. Digestion is hurried by Peruna. The stomach is empty and ready to rest for the night. The circulation is equalized. The brain is relieved of all congestions and irritations.

The Peruna acts on every blood vessel in the system. It acts on all of the nerve centers. One begins to sleep and hardly knows why.

Take a teaspoonful to one tablespoonful of Peruna before each meal. Sometimes another tablespoonful at bedtime is necessary, where the sleeplessness is very pronounced.

Just try it, neighbor. You will be glad if you do. One bottle will convince you. Peruna is no sleep medicine. It is not a nervine. It contains no narcotics. It is nothing of that sort. It is simply a regulative tonic.

Every home should be provided with the last edition of the "Ills of Life," sent free by the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

In Oxford County Mountains.

More Doings and Observations In Maine and New Hampshire in Connection with Appalachian Clubs' Camp Time in Stow.

It turns out to be the case that in the selection of the North Chatham Valley for the place of its August camp the Appalachian Mountain Club builded better than it knew. It was guided in this selection by the fact that the ground selected lies on the edge of a United States government reservation and there has been through the camping time a realization of the accomplishment of the initial takings.

After much in the way of preliminaries the actual establishment of the reservation was a fact, the government was in possession, its foresters had established camps and cut trails, and more important still, had in hand the making of a better map than that of the United States Geological Survey, which is quite at fault. The foresters in anticipation of the coming of the club had cut paths which might be of service to the Appalachians in visiting the Wild River domain and, on the other hand, the club has spent a considerable portion of its activities in spotting trails which may be of use in reaching the reservation.

One of the special works of this kind was the blazing of the way from Carlton's house, the one at the end of the road in North Chatham, through his field and meadow into the heart of the Meader Basin, a magnificent cirque, and up the Meader wall. The path takes first an old logging road into the amphitheatre and then attacks direct the steep but well-timbered slope, to a natural gateway through the rim rock at an elevation of 2000 feet. At this point the Blue Brook trail of the government ends, the line of the reservation being the ridge. From the precipices at the gateway there is an impressive view down into the heavily forested basin and across to the flanking shoulders of Meader and Royce, while far out on the distance rises the form of Speckled Mountain and the Deer Hills with the Kezar Ponds beyond.

It is about two and one-half miles from Carlton's house to the gateway, and with packs on a warm morning it required two hours to tramp it. The government trail is wide and on horse grades and in a quarter of a mile winds down to the head of a long-disused lumber road. This crosses Blue Brook presently, parallels it for a while and then comes to the United States forest service ranger station at the confluence of Blue Brook with Wild River. The trail is not much shorter than that on the Chatham side, but, with the easier grade, may be climbed in an hour and three-quarters.

"Tin" Cabin to be Built.

The station-camp is a temporary one, a permanent "tin" cabin, that is of galvanized iron, being under way, and it is at the southerly end of the new government wagon road and telephone line. The wagon road is laid out on the old Wild River Lumber Railway which left the Grand Trunk at Gilead, and intermediate between the cabin and Bethel is the hamlet of Hastings, the objective point of one of the day's tramps of the Appalachian party. The tin cabin, which is in the heart of the Bean's Purchase tract of 35,000 acres, is to be the administrative centre for this portion of the National Forest. Trains will strike for the upper Wild River valley and up the lateral valleys to the height of land.

In the region immediately about the camp, the Appalachians accomplished excellent work; the country is unusually rich in striking views, especially of the less well-known portions of the White Mountains.

Climbing 2000 Feet Above Camp.

The altitude of the camp was was not great, about 600 feet, while the neighboring peaks making as much as 3600 feet, left about 3000 feet to be accomplished, which in some instances meant a deal of difficult climbing.

Mount Royce is easily the best of the mountains to climb, the east peak having the path cut by Mr. Bent last year up its steep sides. The camp, it should be said, is beyond the last house on the east side of the Cold River, but above this a half-mile is the deserted boarding house of former lumber operations. Here the road stops, so far as anything but foot trafic is concerned, for the bridge across the stream is gone.

Through the Mountains to Gilead.

The path to Royce and to the settlements beyond the ridge, Hastings and Gilead, follows the old lumber road on the west bank of the river, crossing after three quarters of a mile to the east bank and continuing without much grade till nearly two miles have been accomplished. Here the Royce path—at a signboard—crosses the river and instantly attacks the slopes of the mountain by means of an exceedingly steep lumber road, good as to condition, which for a quarter of a mile follows the stream. Then it turns to the west, and without decreasing its grade strikes up one of the main feeders of the river. There is at least a mile of this kind of trail, which comes to an end in a raspberry patch and shrinks to a path, well spotted, which zigzags up by ledge and sharp escapement.

There is not the slightest let-up till ledges within a couple of hundred feet of the top are reached. These project from the face of the cliffs, and to gain this inner wall a slight drop, is necessary. The sharp climb is again resumed, and at the top there are long stretches of smooth ledge, over which one must pick his way with care.

Taken by and large, it is a splendid climb, difficult as Carrigain, say some, which affords numerous views of the noble cliffs of the opposite wall of the west and higher peak.

Site of Ancient Brick House.

Another distinct discovery of the Appalachian camping party was the Brickett Notch. This lies between the Royces and Hayestack, it is a pass of striking boldness and through it it was once proposed to run the Grand Trunk Railway. The elevation of the highest point at 1,340 would have been no barrier, but there was opposition by farmers, who hated to see their lands invaded by the track. Brickett was a pioneer who a hundred years ago came to the valley head, and beyond the present location of any inhabited house on the Maine side built a fine brick house.

The Notch is gained by the same entrance path, as on the river bank there is a deserted and ruinous lumber camp from which the notch path assails the eastern slope—Royce being to the west—descending after a mile to an intervale and deserted lumber camp, which had been approached from the north.

In a little basin under the towering cliffs of Royce this deseited village is set, and one could almost strike it witha stone from the rounded summit $2,000 feet above. Throughout the pass great precipices rise across a notch that is no wider than the famous one at the Profile House, while the almost vertical wall attains a height greater above the path than does Eagle Cliff above the already elevated roadway in the Franconia Notch.

There is here what should be a famous notch, but practically unknown and unviewed save by the hunter or lumberman.

The Brickett Notch is a short cut between North Chatham and the Androscoggin country at Gilead, and to the tramper who wishes to get around will save scores of miles of wagon road. The path is a good one, it is easy to follow, assuming the walker has wood sense, it makes no great height or strenuous grades and is throughout filled with the picturesque.—[Boston Transcript.

Tobacco, Like Food, Must Be Fresh To Be Good

And tobacco cannot keep fresh after it is cut up, any better than bread or meat can. To get fresh tobacco, you must cut it off the plug yourself, just before it goes into your pipe. That's the way you use Sickle tobacco—that's the reason it burns slowly, and always affords you a cool, sweet, satisfying smoke.

Tobacco that comes already cut-up, in packages, gets dry and stale—burns fast and hot, and bites your tongue. The original flavor and moisture cannot escape from the Sickle plug—they are pressed in and kept in by the natural leaf wrapper.

More tobacco—fresh tobacco—no package to pay for—no waste—that's Sickle tobacco. Get a plug at your dealer's today.

F. L. SHAW, President, Portland, Maine. G. D. HARDEN, Treasurer, Bangor Maine

Farm Demonstration.

The University of Maine Extension Department is carrying along a series of orchard demostrations in Oxford Co., under directions of G. A. Yeaton who has charge of the orchard work. These orchards have been selected with reference to their location on roads leading into the business center of the community so that the farmers coming into the town would drive past one of them, and have a chance to see what progress is being made on them and study the methods that are being applied.

J. Merton Wyman of Norway Center was selected as one of the demostrators. He has used for the demonstration the section on his farm plan, as orchard number 2, which consists of 180 Baldwin apple trees that have been set out about twenty years.

The plat was divided into two equal sections. Both of these plats were pruned in April under Mr. Yeaton's directions. April 20th stable manure at the rate of 7 cords per acre was applied to the entire orchard. One half of this was left in sod as a check, the other half was plowed five inches deep and harrowed at frequent intervals until Aug. 10. At that time it was sown with winter rye for a cover crop to prevent soil waste. The spraying has been the same in the entire orchard, viz.: April 18, the dormant spray. May 20, when buds were showing pink, June 8, after the petals fell.

There was a light blossom in the orchard, but in the cultivated section a fairly good set of fruit and the June drop was light.

In spite of the extreme drowth the foliage is very rich in texture and color. On the part in sod the conditions are the reverse. The June drop extremely heavy, foliage pale and beginning to fall at this time, and the fruit that remained on the trees is quite a little smaller than on the cultivated portion.

This demonstration is an object lesson that all who have orchards should take home. It shows that by cultivation we can conserve the moisture and grow a good crop even in the off year.

Mr. Wyman will have between 250 and 300 barrels of fancy Baldwins, and as he is one of the most active members of the Fruit Growers' Association he will get the top price for them.

After Many Years.

After one hundred years of title in other hands the estate of 100 acres across the highway from the Mansion House has again passed into the hands of the Rickers.

This history of this property, thus returning to the Rickers, is interesting. It was a part of the estate of Jabez Ricker, the original owner of the property which was secured in exchange with the Shakers. From him this estate passed to three sons, Wentworth, grandfather of the present owners of Poland Spring; Joseph Ricker and Samuel Ricker. The portion included in this sale was the property of Samuel Ricker.

One hundred years ago, almost to a month, Samuel Ricker sold this farm and moved to Ohio. His trip across the country, starting out in the spring with four horses and a sleigh, with $800 in silver concealed in the double-bottom of the vehicle, forms an interesting chapter in the family chronicles and today a granddaughter of Samuel Ricker, who once owned this property lives, at advanced age, in Denver, Colorado. Her father was a civil engineer and years ago, when about 40 years of age, he drew a plan of what is now the Poland Spring property. It was on rough brown paper but was exact in every particular save one—he made the water of the three ponds run south instead of north.

This drawing was embellished with many locations, referring to family history of the Rickers—such as the spot where the man was killed by the ox, a familiar episode in old time tales.

To this aged lady in Denver, Colorado, Mrs. Freeman by name, E. P. Ricker wrote a letter saying that her grandfather's farm had again come back to the family after exactly a century of ownership in other hands, and incidentally remarking that he hoped that this purchase by Hiram Ricker & Sons might give her pleasure, it being unusual for property once passing out of a family, again to return to it after the lapse of so many years.

Portable Lawns of Grass Carpet.

Living-grass carpets that can be used as table covers, coats, or for making temporary or permanent lawns are now manufactured in England. They are really living carpets, for the grass with which they are covered continues to grow in whatever place or use the carpet is put, as shown by illustrations appearing in the October Popular Mechanics Magazine.

To make them, millions of grass seeds are sown on a strip of carpet in a green house and allowed to sprout and grow. When the grass has taken root, the carpet can be handled like a rug. If a temporary lawn is desired, the ground is rolled and the carpet is laid down in strips; afterward it can be taken up and used elsewhere. When it is allowed to remain in one place, it takes root and forms a beautiful lawn. An entire lawn can be laid in a day and two lengths of carpet will make a cricket pitch.

Few People Grow Mentally After the Age of 35.

In a remarkable contribution to the October American Magazine, Arnold L. Gesell says:

"One fact which seems to distinguish superior from ordinary families is that, while members of the latter seem almost to stop growing at about the age of 35, the lives of the former deepen and expand even into the vanishing years of old age. A visitor returns to the village after an absence of ten years. He is shocked at the relative standstill of a large part of the population.

"This lack of development after the age of 35 or 40 represents primarily an innate deficiency in the protoplasm of the nervous system. It is a psychological fact undoubtedly of eugenic import. Superior individuals exhibit a lengthening of the period of plasticity and growth. Their personalities are correspondingly the richer from experience."

Plowing in the Fall.

The farmer who can find time and the conditions fit can employ himself to good advantage by plowing all of his potato, oats and corn ground during the late fall and winter, says a writer on the subject of Winter Plowing. The only good excuse for not plowing in cold weather is in case the field is in good pasture and stock running on it. Of course, if the the ground is very wet or frozen hard all the time plowing cannot be done. But if the ground is only moderately damp, plowing at this season will do no injury to the soil, since freezing and weathering for several months will correct conditions that would not be good if the ground were plowed wet in summer.

It is good farm management to get as much of the plowing done as possible in winter so that teams and hands will not need to be rushed in spring, when the weather is warm and the work animals tender. It is much better for the teams to do some of the work now. Regularity in the harness is an aid in keeping them in good hard flesh, and if they are worked a few days every week in winter, they will stand the spring and summer work much better. Winter plowing enables the farmers to realize his plans of field work, and full crops can be planted in the spring at the right time without delay, which means much in cultivating the crops for early and large maturity. If the spring season opens up wet for a few weeks and all of the fields must be plowed in the spring, the program will receive a set back, with late planting and poor yields as a result.

An advantage in winter plowing, besides getting a lot of the heavy work done before seeding time begins is that freezing helps to mellow and fertilize the soil. Fertility is actually added to the surface soil if turned up to the action of the weather for several weeks. Deep plowing is condemned by some, because it is held that the soil, 6 or 3 inches below the surface is not so fertile as that immediately on the surface.

But when the deeper soil is turned up to the action of the air and freezing, some of the insoluble mineral elements are reduced through weathering to a soluable state and hence become available plant foods. The deep soil as a rule is rich in plant foods, but these are inert because they have never been reduced to a soluble state by weathering. The disintegrating action is greater in cold than in warm weather.

For these reasons it is better to plow deep in winter than in summer especially with thin land or heavy clays. The more fertile soil is turned under and the less fertile and heavy soil is turned up for weathering which becomes more fertile through the action.

The winter plowed field should be left in the rough furrow till spring so that the freezing action can take place as deep as possible. The rougher and more open the better the results will be. Also, it is a good plan to plow under as much of all old and dead grass and weeds possible as well as manure that may have been scattered on the surface. These will be in a position to soften and decay for better decomposition when the plowed ground is worked down to a seed-bed in the spring. Air and moisture are aids in quick decomposition of dead vegetable matter on or in the soil.

When ground has been plowed in fall or winter, it is an excellent plan to cover the rough field with stable manure when the soil is frozen hard enough to hold up team and wagon. This will allow portions of the manure to fall into the depressions among the clods hence some will reach below and some will remain on top. All of the surface soil to a depth of the plowing and deeper, will become fertilized through winter rains reaching the rich substances from the manure. In this manner, too, the soil will not become compact, since the dry portions of the manure among the clods will prevent them from running together with heavy rains. In the spring the disk and harrow will mix the manure and soil with the best results.

Slaves in Original States.

There were Negro slaves in all of the 13 states at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, the number being distributed af follows:

New Hampshire, 158; Vermont, 17; Rhode Island, 952; Connecticut, 2750; New York, 21,324; New Jersey, 11,423; Pennsylvania, 3737; Deleware, 8887, Maryland, 103,086; Virginia, 293,427; North Carolina, 100,571; South Carolina, 107,097, Georgia, 29,264. At the same time these were in Tennessee, 3417, and in Kentucky 11,830, giving a total of 697,897 Negro slaves, with a total population of 3,929,214.

There seems to be more or less discussion through the Maine newspapers as to the difference between blueberries and huckleberries—some maintaining they are one and the same berry. The editor raises both on his Round Pond farm, and the way he understands it there is a distinct difference. The huckleberries are what many in New Hampshire call black snaps or blue snaps according to the color. Blueberries and huckleberries look some alike but they do not taste at all alike. There is a seed in the huckleberry that snaps as one chews it, and they are a firmer berry.
